A 15 per cent. reduction in wages and the installation of a shop-work system brought about the strike which completely closed down the plant for a time.

Tube With Too High Factor of Amplification Has High Plate Resistance

DISORDER IN HIGH 'TURN RATIO'

What is really wanted in the case of audio frequency amplification is an amplifying transformer which will reproduce frequencies which range from the 100 cycle with comparatively little distortion.

It is extremely difficult to obtain such a device, although some transformers on the market work very well on frequencies of about 200 cycles a second up to 4,000.

In the event that a loud speaker is used in connection with a set it will be well to have the transformer a fairly large, the higher frequency, some transformers on the market actually do this very thing.

In all cases, a transformer with a high "turn ratio" should be avoided if distortion is to be avoided.

In the present tube transformer are having a ratio of about 4 to 1 have been found to be the most successful. A given transformer has an impedance ratio of 1 to 1, it is used with the power tube. It is not possible to use a tube with too high an amplification factor, while some tubes have a high ratio of amplification.

A high plate resistance has the effect of making the transformer in a circuit more at the higher and lower frequency end of the spectrum.

The amplifier of course, is only based on a question of quality and not on that of quantity. It is not after all, the amplifier "A" is used.

After all, the amplifier "A" is used. It is not after all, the amplifier "A" is used. It is not after all, the amplifier "A" is used.

NEW ZR-3 BREAKS RECORD FOR SPEED

Fredericktown, Germany, Aug. 25 (Continued from page 1)—German built Zeppelin is not only a recreation of the air but also holds the new club for endurance speed.

The Hugo Eckener, chief engineer and commander, mentioned that the ZR-3 surpassed all expectations and calculations.

In spite of extra fuel of three tons and additional extra fuel on the heavy rain at the start, the airship made an average speed of seventy-six miles per hour.

BRING TWO BACK FROM N. Y. IN FUR THEFTS

Men Accused of the $120,000 Boylston Street Robberies Face Court

Joseph Morris and James Brown, arrested in New York on indictment yesterday charging them with the looting of $120,000 worth of furs from the Boylston street store, were brought back to Boston today. The men were captured in New York on information furnished by the Boston Bureau of Criminal Investigation, shortly after the daylight robbery of Edward F. Kalkas & Sons and the other Fur Company, both at No. 241 Boylston street. They were taken to police headquarters by Inspectors Joseph R. Egan and Benjamin Alexander, who brought them from New York, and after being fingerprinted and photographed, were arraigned in Superior Court.

Cat and Insects Wreak Havoc at Capital

Washington, D. C., Aug. 28.—Never underestimate the damage that the lower forms of life are capable of inflicting on the human race. For instance, William H. Fairchild, found a cat trying to get at some of his birds. He ejected the cat and was bitten by the feline. He died of blood poisoning. Joseph Poradzinski, attorney of the Polish legation, was strung by a house fly while driving his automobile. He lost control of the machine, drove it into a tree and Mrs. Poradzinski was badly cut by flying glass. Miss Marie Golonski, while driving her car near Chevy Chase Circle was struck in the eye by a grasshopper. The car ran over the sidewalk, mounted a high terrace and upset. She escaped injury.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Of course I am so thrilled to think that I should be the only one aboard this ship when the Prince of Wales is here. I was asked to dance with him, but I can not yet believe it. But what a much more important thing I understand all kinds of words have been sent from the ship promising to be very nice to me, while the truth is I have not given a single word for publication yet. It is a fact that Americans at home are really interested in what has happened to me. I suppose that the truly most astounding part of it all is the fact that I was probably the only one of my sex who boarded the Berengaria without an idea that the Prince of Wales was to be a fellow passenger. As a matter of fact, my aunt, Mrs. W. F. Brown of New Orleans, and I, too, did everything possible to avoid taking this ship, because we crossed on her last Summer and wanted to go home on the Majestic. We have been in Scotland for two or three months and wanted to go to France to visit a certain little town where we have a sentimental interest. We wanted the extra time from the Berengaria's stay, sailing until the Majestic's Wednesday sailing from Southampton to make this cross-channel journey. But we and indeed, we could not get decent accommodations on the Majestic and at the last minute decided to go on the Berengaria. Once aboard, of course, it was quickly discovered that the Prince of Wales was there and I admit that I got a thrill right away. But through a line only through a few midnight friends who put around with me I had no idea that I would give the good fortune to be presented. Having been on the other side for more than 12 years and having done no shopping whatever, my clothes were in rags and I went with me

GIRL PLUNGES FROM SPEEDING CAR IN LYNN

Police Patch Her Up, Then She Patches Up Quarrel With Trio in Auto

Seemingly hysterical for help, a girl jumped from a touring car early today, as it roared through Melrose square, West Lynn, where Detective William J. Shupik, who was passing, picked the girl up and commanded a car in which he obtained the machine from which she had made such a dramatic exit. At Danvers station, on Summer street, West Lynn, he caught up with it and forced the driver to halt. Brought back to police headquarters, Lynn, the machine was found to be occupied by another girl and two young men. The girl who jumped said she was Miss Margaret Jones of Talley street, Bedford. The other girl said she was Maud Hatch, eighteen, of Porter street, Melrose. The men described themselves as Edward D. McLaughlin of Sloan street, Stoneham, and Richard McGovern of Bella street, Melrose Highlands. Miss Jones had explained her ankle and foot bruised herself, she was treated by a police surgeon. As Miss Jones made no complaint against her escort or the other men, no arrests were made. The four got back into the machine and started off.

A Little Politics

Everything Going Nicely

John W. Davis repeats that honesty is the chief issue in this campaign. He tells the reporters he will not discuss anything else to speak of. Most distinctly he will NOT discuss his work as lawyer for J. Pierpont Morgan, the big telephone company or in fact any of his legal work. That settles that point. If you want to ask Mr. Davis anything about his clients you must wait until after Election Day.

He has dropped all of them during the campaign.

Republicans announced that La Follette is losing his votes at the rate of 10 per cent. every two weeks. That's practical calculating, for it would leave him with no votes at all on Election Day.

It may be that La Follette's followers emphasize too much his union labor backing and not sufficiently the fact that he represents a large element in favor of definite changes in no way connected with union labor.

However, the Republicans exaggerate their good fortune. La Follette's vote will surprise them.

The Old politicians believe that La Follette will run second among the three presidential candidates.

Stop the Nonsense

What Is the Use of Embassies?

The Turkish government remains in Ankara. It annoys the British, who think that Constantinople should be the Turkish seat of government. Now the British suggest to other nations that they have only MINISTERS instead of Ambassadors in Constantinople, thus saving a great deal of money. The idea in this case is to persuade the Turks to make Constantinople the government headquarters.

Why wouldn't it be a good idea to abolish the nonsense and flummery of embassies EVERYWHERE? With radio and cable service, the ambassador is only an expensive messenger boy. He is usually sent from the United States to reward him for campaign contributions, or to give his wife a chance to meet the king and queen.

What's the use of spending so much money on that? Great Britain, with a LABOR government, might well set a good example by cutting out that expensive nonsense. This country, which has a high FINANCIAL government, can hardly be expected to make the start.

$4,500 a-Begging

It's a Prosperous Land

You realize that this is a prosperous country with good wages quite plentiful, when you read that New York City lacks applicants for a $4,500 life job as golf supervisor. The city owns public golf courses and wants somebody to take charge of them.

Only eight men presented themselves and they didn't seem particular about the job. It's a civil service job and you have to pass an examination.

Just what the examiners could appropriately ask a candidate is hard to imagine. How to keep weeds out of the greens, perhaps. The usual questions about geography, history, etc., would seem to make little difference to a golf supervisor, who needs only to know about bunkers, sand pits, etc.

Think of $4,500 FOR LIFE, out in the open. It seems a good job.

Our Patient Bodies

How They Do Come Back

John D. Rockefeller, after years of extreme abstemiousness, has finally conquered the digestive troubles that once conquered him, and can now eat what he pleases.

The human body, long suffering and patient, has wonderful powers of recuperation.

Given half a chance it will "come back" at almost any age.

Luigi Cornaro, his digestion ruined by excesses of all sorts, and given up to die in the forties, changed, lived wisely, wrote his book at ninety-four, and lived past one hundred. Others can do the same, as Mr. Rockefeller has proved.

How Big Is the Cosmos?

Bigger Than Our Understanding

Mr. Silberstein, scientist, using the Einstein theory, has measured the size of the universe. He says "The radius of the universe is 114,000,000 light years."

By this he means that light traveling 186,000 miles a second would cover from one end of the universe to the other, or go around it if it is a circle, in 114,000,000 years.

You can figure out the total distance by multiplying 186,000 by 60 to get the speed per minute, then again by 60 to get the speed per hour. Multiply by 24 to get the day's speed, then by 365 to get the year's speed, then by 114,000,000 to get the total, not forgetting to add in an extra day for Leap Year, and you will know how big the universe is—or rather you won't know any more than you know now.

Man is FINITE, the universe is INFINITE. A limited brain was put here to look after a little limited earth and live in a tiny solar system. That brain does pretty well, considering, but it knows as much about the real universe, its size, shape, plan and purpose, as a frog beside the railroad track knows about the Twentieth Century express train.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

IT WOULD BE AN UNCOMMON CONFESSION to make, but I am sure that every woman who has ever been married can understand the following meditation:

One man's love is like a mother's that if a girl closes her eyes she can tell whether it is this man or that. She can tell whether it is this man or that. She can tell whether it is this man or that.

Sometimes a woman wonders if they are all members of the same Correspondence School of Courtship. Alas, Romeo would have blushed with shame and wept with sorrow to see the doctrine of the fine art of love-making.

Yet in spite of all the really most guaranteed perfectly safe. First, Alas to Courtship, a genuine proposal of marriage is as hard to get as a divorce.

The most difficult words in the English language for any man to pronounce with respect to a woman are "I love you" and "Will you marry me?"

He will gladden her with words and with all around an array of love—and if he leaves her to carry on a rope and save you in literal love into it.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

TONIGHT I heard a melody, and the wide world was the sweetest song; and I said to myself, "What a lovely melody!" and I said to myself, "What a lovely melody!"

THE HELPING HAND

Letters Not Answered Personally. No Attention Paid to Telephone Calls or Anonymous Letters. No Names Published.

Deserted Wife Seeks Work

Helping Hand Editor: I would appreciate it very much if you could help me get a job. I have been married for a few years, and I have a young child. I am in need of money badly.

Good Winter Coats: I have a lot of good coats, ranging from ten years up to women's clothes. I have two good Winter coats, underwear and shoes.

Helping Hand Editor: I have a cape blue suit, brown velvet dress, all size 15, and some shoes which anyone living in this vicinity could have by calling for them.

Girl Needs Dresses: Helping Hand Editor: I am a little girl, 11 years old. My mother doesn't have any dresses for me.

Would Pay In Sewing: Helping Hand Editor: I have just received from a long and serious operation and find myself with nothing left, even my trunk and clothes. I have a lot of money. I have a reader who has some old furniture or clothes that he does not need.

Once-Overs: LEARN TO DRIVE SLOWLY, ESPECIALLY THROUGH SMALL TOWNS. To the city man accustomed to driving an automobile in crowded streets there is a temptation to speed as he whips past through small town people for years did not take any action to protect themselves.

It is different now. There is more danger in driving fast through a small place than there is in a larger one, as few now from the city realize.

More children play in the streets and there is more "jay walking." Residents of small towns expect sane driving more than city folk do.

Consequently, they are not on the alert when they cross back and forth and the city drivers would not be so likely to recognize the fact and save themselves a fine or a possible heavy damage.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON CARPE DIEM

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE ancients had a motto, "Carpe Diem," which literally translated means, "Seize today." It was generally supposed to be the motto of reckless people and of those who sacrificed the present to the future thoughtlessly. There is something to be said, however, in favor of it for more thoughtful people.

Man is a peculiar animal in that he lives not in the present but always in the future or past. We draw our satisfactions not from the only time which is ours, the present, but from the time which we do not know whether it be ours or not, the future.

We live in the future. Part of the time we are distressed over its anticipation of evil, the rest of the time we are delighted over its expectations of good.

And yet we do not know whether it will come or not. All that we are certain of is the present.

There are some natures who live always in the past and, like La Fontaine's wife, are forever looking back. They consume themselves in remorse or in gratification over what has already taken place notwithstanding the fact that nothing can change it. What is past is past.

Those who get the most out of life indubitably are those who live in the present, who understand how to enjoy what pleasures are theirs now and who willingly undergo the pains that may be theirs.

This does not imply that one should be blind or reckless as to the future or indifferent as to the past. The time will never come when man, who is essentially a time-binding animal, can live wholly in either one of the three sections. The present will always be bound up with the past and future.

But we will get much more out of life if we learn to seek our satisfactions and to appreciate them in the present and neither consume ourselves in vain regret for the past nor absorb hopes for that which is to come.

There is, besides a heartless and foolish meaning to this motto Carpe Diem, an intelligent and Christian meaning, wholly consistent with our responsibilities of the past and of the future.

We should undoubtedly get more out of life if we learned simply and naturally to take things as they come.

It was not intended by whoever created the human race that we should know the future definitely. It was manifestly intended that we should live one day at a time and those who have conformed to this rule of life get the most out of it.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON AVIATION

By Garrett P. Serviss.

LEUTENANT COLONEL PAUL L. RICHARD, in defending the competition for records in flying, says on the ground that this strife has proved itself a direct and powerful aid in the development of the art and science of aerial flight in all its aspects.

Very justly, Colonel Richard gives a conspicuous place to Santos Dumont, whose agile little figure—a very "human fly"—sleek in the memory of everyone who saw him in New York at the beginning of the century, when his aerial feats in saving himself from the consequences of dangerous tumbles did not avail to convince the skeptics that the era of human flight was right at hand.

The principal records concern distance flown during a flight, speed attained and highest elevation.

Dumont's Record: In 1906 Santos Dumont succeeded in traveling 229 metres (about 752 feet) without stopping. With such a little hop did the bird start its wings and open its marvelous carapace. A year later Henri Farman made a continuous flight of a fifteen mile (thirtysix) kilometres. People opened their eyes at that; it began to look serious. It seemed something more than play.

Then the Wright brothers came to the front. Wilbur Wright went over to France to show what American luck and genius could do with a new thing. On December 31, 1908, he flew more than one hundred kilometres (over sixty-two miles) without stopping. As Col. Richard says, "A cetra species showed that it was a bird."

And today, as the development of aviation still advances it is evident that the new empire which it has given into human charge is not to be an empire from which war will be excluded; rather the contrary, the nations are embracing themselves in the sky.

The important question now is, not who shall command the sea, but who shall command the air, the sky, the clouds, the wind, the sun, the moon, the stars, the planets, the galaxies, the universe.

The question of speed will play an enormous part in both the peaceful and the warlike aspect of the new aviation, and the speed is already becoming enormous.

In 1907, Santos Dumont made, actually, 41 kilometres per hour; in 1908, 100 kilometres; in 1909, 160 kilometres; in 1910, 200 kilometres; in 1911, 240 kilometres; and at the moment of writing Lieutenant Colonel Richard made his first flight across the English Channel, made by a man, and Everybody rubbed his eyes now; it was a new age dawning. WORDS OF THE WISE MEN
